

Jan 12 - 1940

Technical College Birthday

Yesterday (Thursday) was the 48th anniversary of the Stroud Technical Schools—now the Technical College—in Lansdown, and it is appropriate that several of the departments of this valuable institution—Engineering, Building, and Pure Science—were enabled to return in time to spend the anniversary within their original home. As we remarked a week ago the Technical College was in the wilderness throughout last term, but full activity has now been resumed, additional accommodation being acquired in Kendrick Hall for Commercial, Languages and Dressmaking Classes. Owing to the comparatively new accommodation provided near Church Street Schools the Textile Classes were the least affected by the changed conditions of last term.

* * *

School of Art returns Home

The Stroud School of Art, which also had to migrate from the Lansdown premises, has returned home for the present term which

of
tim

opened last Monday. Although its work suffered some dislocation, the School functioned quite happily and successfully in the Schoolroom of John Street Baptist Church which had generously been placed at the disposal of the School of Art. Mr. Gwilym Jones, the Headmaster, is a cheerful person who has the facility of meeting adversity with a smile, and his characteristic acceptance of the unusual situation enabled the School to continue its useful work throughout the autumn term. The School of Art, by the way, was established eighty years ago, Mr. S. Dickinson (Lord Dickinson's father) being one of its founders and its first hon. secretary.

Technical College Birthday

Yesterday (Thursday) was the 48th anniversary of the Stroud Technical Schools—now the Technical College—in Lansdown, and it is appropriate that several of the departments of this valuable institution—Engineering, Building, and Pure Science—were enabled to return in time to spend the anniversary within their original home. As we remarked a week ago the Technical College was in the wilderness throughout last term, but full activity has now been resumed, additional accommodation being acquired in Kendrick Hall for Commercial, Languages and Dressmaking Classes. Owing to the comparatively new accommodation provided near Church Street Schools the Textile Classes were the least affected by the changed conditions of last term.

* * *

School of Art returns Home

The Stroud School of Art, which also had to migrate from the Lansdown premises, has returned home for the present term which

On
tim

Jan 12 - 1940

opened last Monday. Although its work suffered some dislocation, the School functioned quite happily and successfully in the Schoolroom of John Street Baptist Church which had generously been placed at the disposal of the School of Art. Mr. Gwilym Jones, the Headmaster, is a cheerful person who has the facility of meeting adversity with a smile, and his characteristic acceptance of the unusual situation enabled the School to continue its useful work throughout the autumn term. The School of Art, by the way, was established eighty years ago, Mr. S. Dickinson (Lord Dickinson's father) being one of its founders and its first hon. secretary.